"The world is out there for us to change. For now, though, we must concentrate upon building ourselves, preparing for the future. We have taken the first step, and despite the obstacles within us or without, we must continue to challenge ourselves to reach beyond our boundaries, because that is the way we are. We are members of the Louisiana School, and we are here to succeed."

Relieving stress became a favorite pastime

Finding new, inventive methods to relieve stress became a favorite hobby for most La. School students. Most stress reliefs hinged on physical activity, music, and retreating into obscurity for a while.

Sometimes i sit in wonder-
what i am to be,
Whenever i look to the future-
all i see is an endless sea.

Sometimes i feel i'm swimming-
toward an unseen shore,
I feel like i've been swimming so long-
and getting no closer-
i just can't keep up anymore.

Sometimes i feel like letting go-
just calling an end to the fight,
Just letting go and sinking down-
then i'd feel so light.

But, it seems only to add pressure-
more and more as you go,
Why is it with some of us-
we just can't follow the flow?

Then that's when i realize-
all you have to do is follow the glow
Keeping right this side of the hill-where only the flowers grow.

Of course there's always bushes-
to hinder your wayward path,
Just keep in heart the One true light-
and ignore the runner's scath.

Whenever your feet stray of the path-
when your eyes can't find the sand, Always remember an old friend's near-
to lend a helping hand.

Imagine, if you will, a group of educators who would give up the best in positions to come to an unknown school in an unknown city. Imagine teachers from all over the country who, when combined, build an unstoppable teaching machine. Just think if they could be at your side to help you with homework late at night. life at LSMSA

On September 7, 1983, we moved into the LSMSA dormitories and into a new lifestyle. We met new people, enhanced our education and began to discover ourselves. We came together as friends and formed a new and unique family — one which built itself on the common trials and joys we encountered in this first challenging year. In our hearts we will cherish these beautiful memories forever.

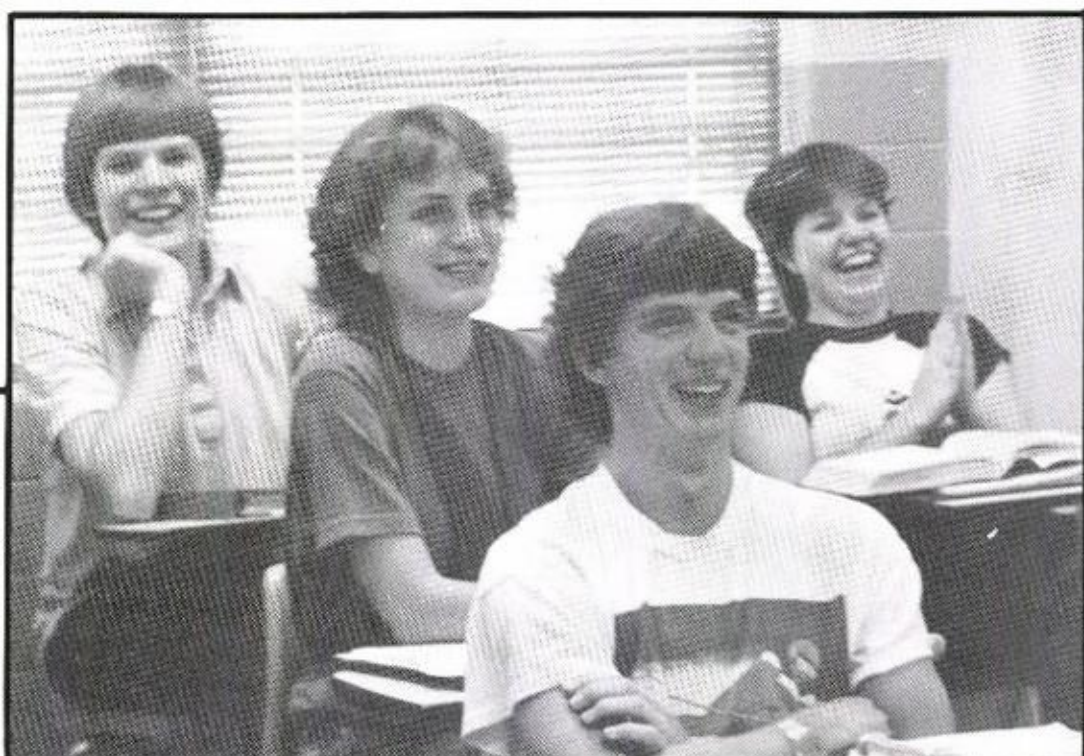

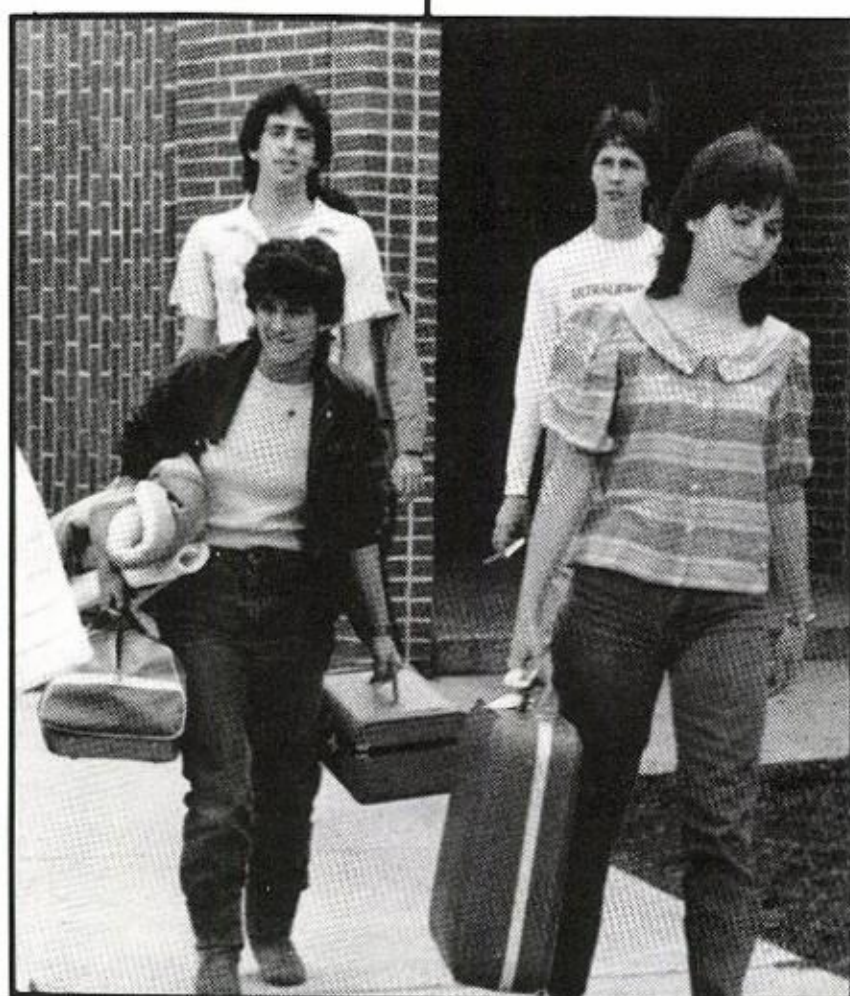

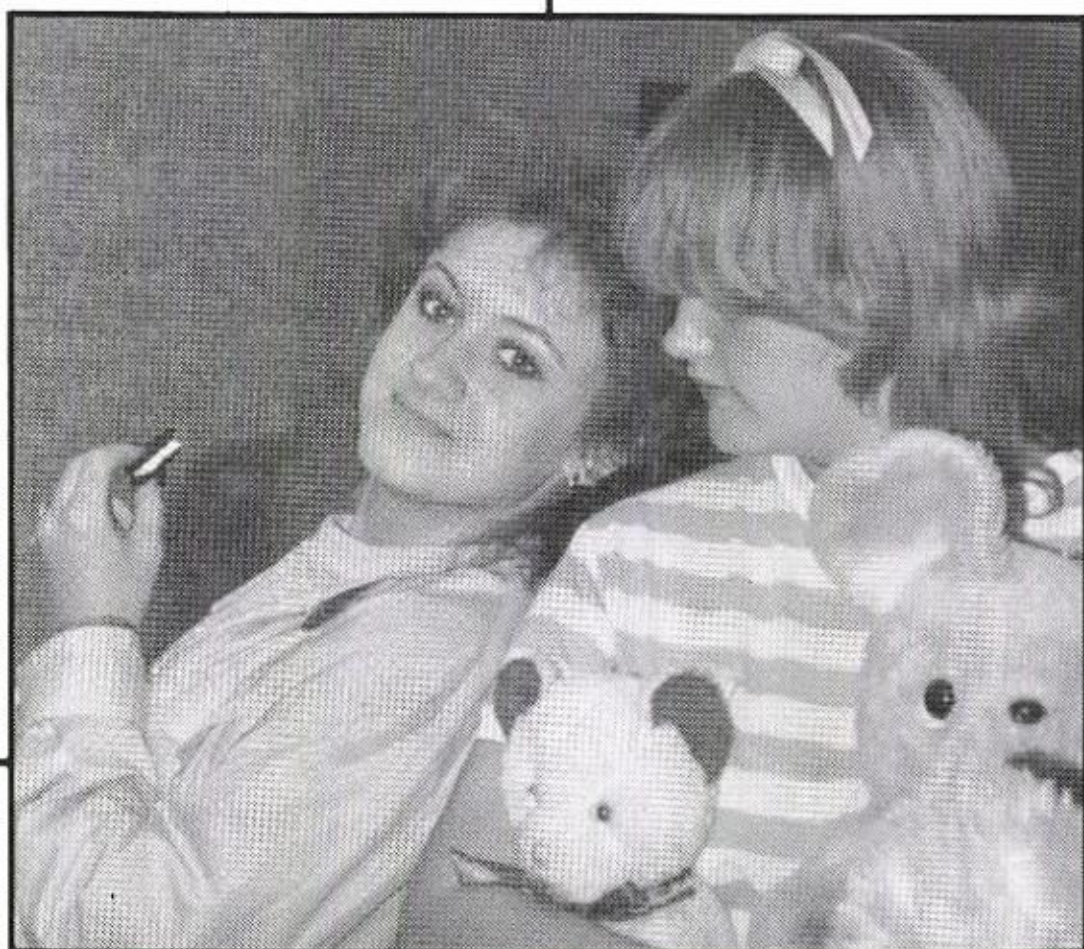

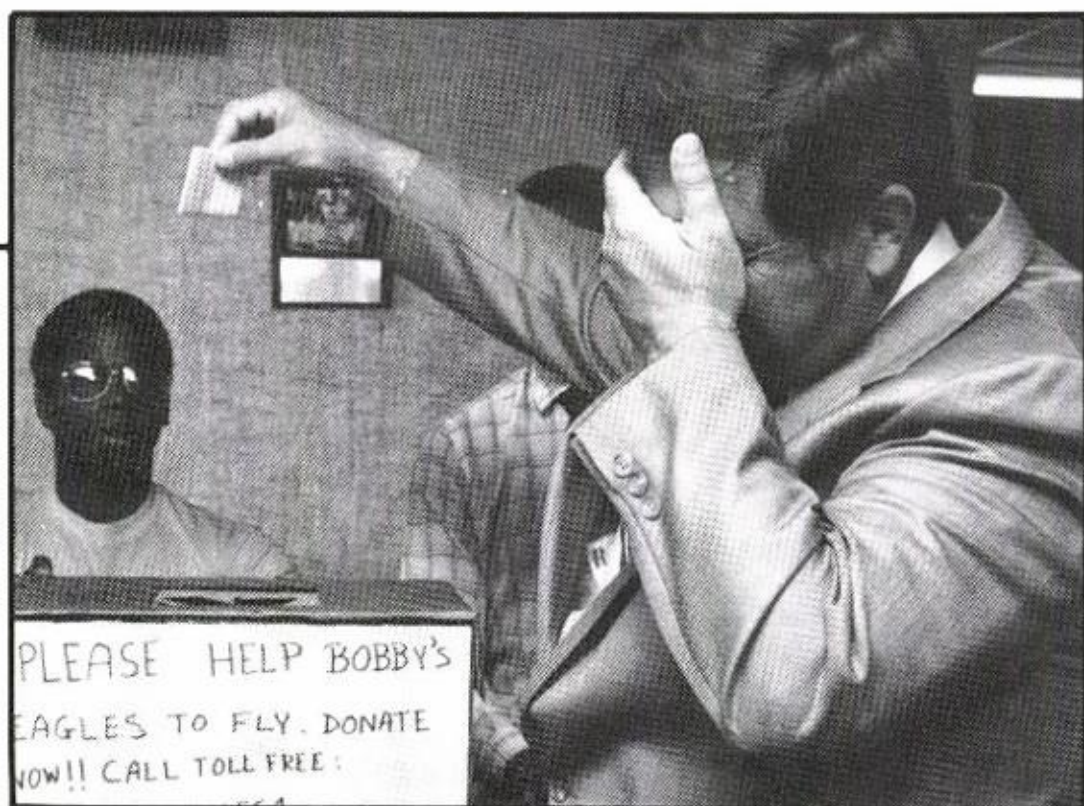

Stand tall, stand on the edge.
Use the thin end of the wedge;
The will to cast your fate
Don't turn around too late
Lose ground if we hesitate
Burning youth won't wait.

Student Activities

Student activities at LSMSA require that students become involved. These activities bring the students closer together, and make them feel more like a family. These activities range from required to optional, from fun to mundane, from Grand Opening to Prom.

At LSMSA, focus is placed on "a community of scholars". In order to have a community, people must know each other and be willing to help each other. Student activities begins the act of everyone meeting everyone, starting with the barbecue-dance, the first night. Other activities throughout the year promoted the "community" effect. For instance, complaining about 9:00 guest speakers on Saturday mornings was a group grumble. Student activities are a unifying element at LSMSA.

Dr. Alost, director of the Louisiana School, recites everyone's favorite analogy, quoting Robert Frost's "The Road Not Taken".

Governor David C. Treen speaks at Grand Opening. Treen passed legislation authorizing the formation of the school and allocating funds to LSMSA.

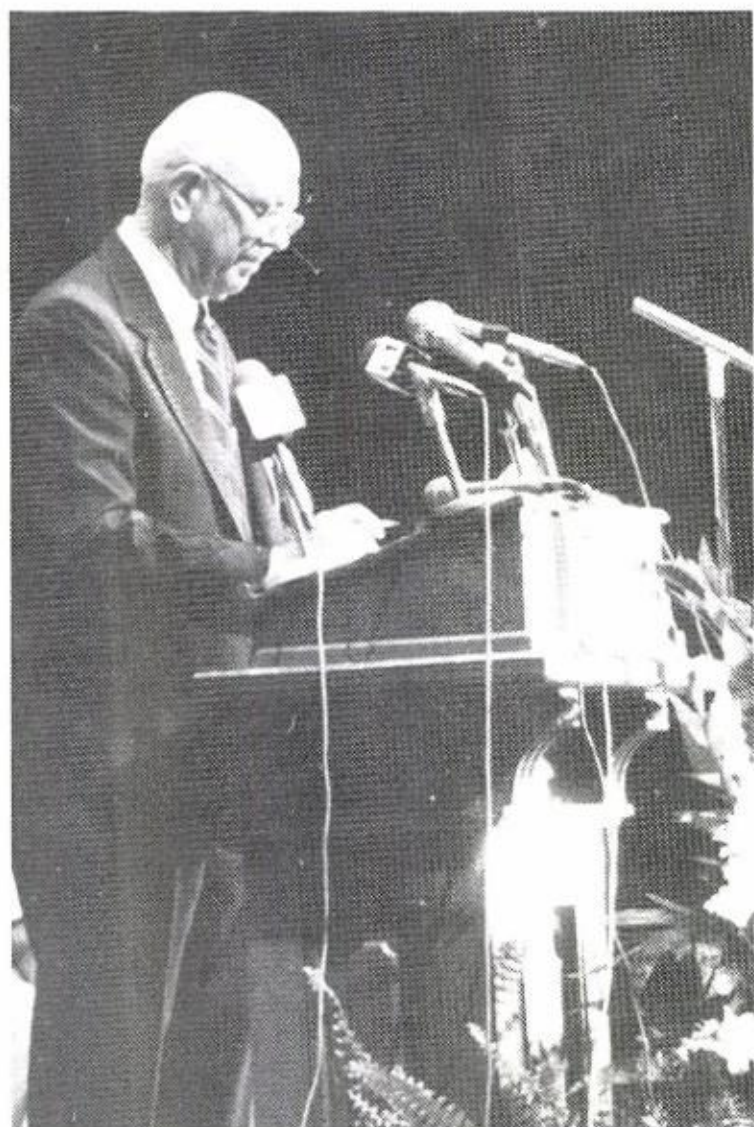

Parents, students and visitors enjoy refreshments under a tent set up for the occasion behind Prudhomme.

Parents and legislators travelled across the state to attend the Grand Opening. After the ceremony, everyone visited behind Prudhomme.

Harrison Brace "The chosen one", picked by the administration to speak on behalf of the students.

Mr. Stan Powell, deputy director of LSMSA, delivers his most memorable speech to the assembly.

The Grand Opening of the Louisiana School for Math, Science, and the Arts was held on Thursday, September 29, 1983. Rehearsals were held on Wednesday afternoon; it took almost an hour to sit all the students in alphabetical order. However, the most remembered preparation are the meetings called to learn Gaudeamus Igitur, the song no one could interpret. Governor Dave Treen was the Guest speaker at the ceremony. After the ceremony the assembly left AA. Fredricks Fine Arts Building, proceeding to Prudhomme Hall for the ribbon-cutting and refreshments.

Grand Opening was very significant to members of the Senior Class of 1985, because we will be the first, and we are setting the precedent for all future classes.

Guest Speakers

On April 25, Master Sergeant Steve Krestian of Shreveport spoke about different types of motivation.

LSMSA has had a unique selection of guest speakers this year. Generally, the speakers talk on either Thursday or Saturday morning, giving a brief question and answer session by allowing students to raise their hands in the assembly or answering questions on an individual basis after the assembly is dismissed. Some of the speakers were stimulating, while others were sleep-inducing.

Several of this year's speakers were:

Roger Taylor spoke to the students on Saturday, September 10, about two personality types: CS (Concrete Sequential) and RR (Random Romantic). This provided a topic of conversation for newly-made friends.

On Saturday, October 29, Robert Malone, a futurist, spoke to us about his views of what will happen in the next few years. He also analyzed trends. Malone showed us a breath-taking display of robotic arms from the future world of robotics.

On January 6, Ralph Perleman from the State Budget Office spoke on the history of Louisiana's economy. Perleman, who finalizes the school's budget explained to the students how the funds are allocated.

Steve Morgan, another personality analyzer spoke on January 7. Personalities were evaluated on the basis of D (Dominance), I (Influencing of others), S (Steadiness), and C (Compliance).

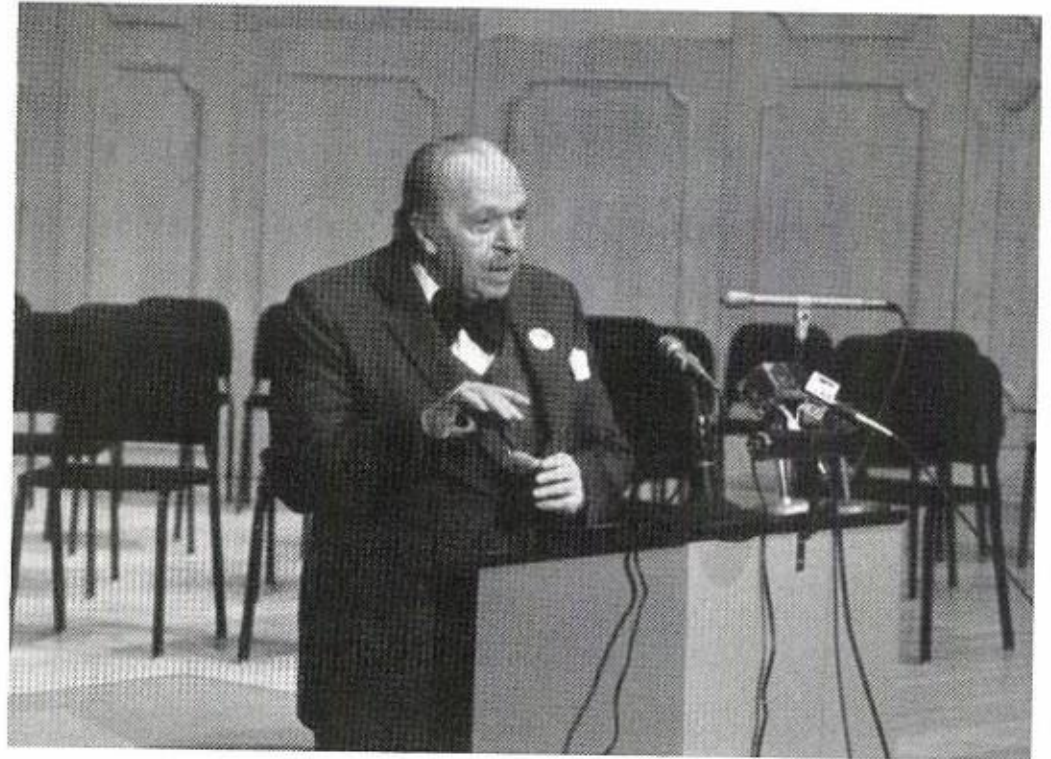

Reg Carter, from the Educational Testing Service spoke on Tuesday, April 24 about testing and how test scores are related to college acceptance. The speech provided the students with a sense of relief.

As a special privilege, LSMSA students were invited to attend Rev. Jesse Jackson's campaign speech for Democratic Presidential candidate prior to Louisiana primaries. Many students were impressed with Jackson's style of delivery.

The memorable David Hamilton, lawyer of Louisiana School, lectured the students on Saturday, October 29.

Joshua Logan, a native of Louisiana, spoke to the students on Thursday, January, 16. He talked of his career as a playwright and producer and told several lengthy anecdotes.

Harold Pluimer, a futurist, answers students' question on an individual basis following his speech. On February 10, he spoke of our place in the future.

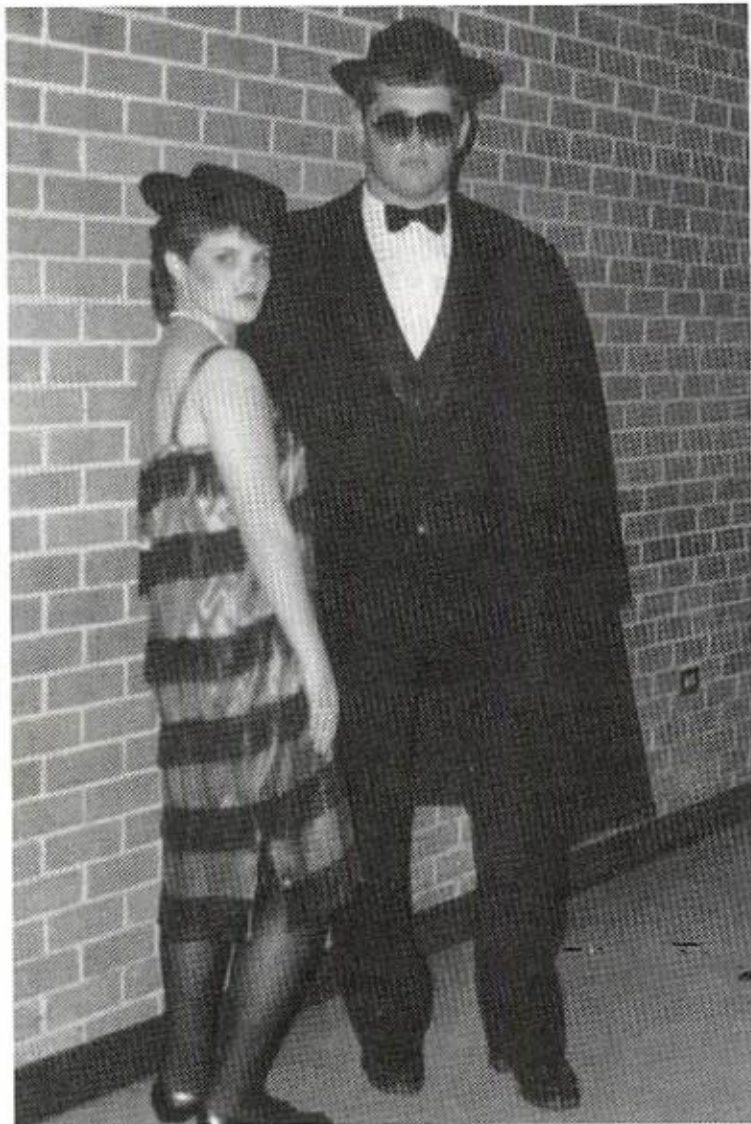

George Walter addressed the fine arts students on Friday, March 16, and talked to all students the next day. His topic was "The American Hero." He gave a superb dramatic interpretation of "Casey at the Bat." His style prevented many students from dozing off.

Ring Ceremony

The Louisiana School's first ring ceremony held May 19, was a very exciting occasion. In coordination with Josten's Ring Company, Louisiana School students created the design for their rings. After receiving their rings, students circulated around the room turning each others rings. The rings were turned eighty-five times symbolizing the graduation year of the Louisiana school's first Senior Class.

JUNIOR PROM

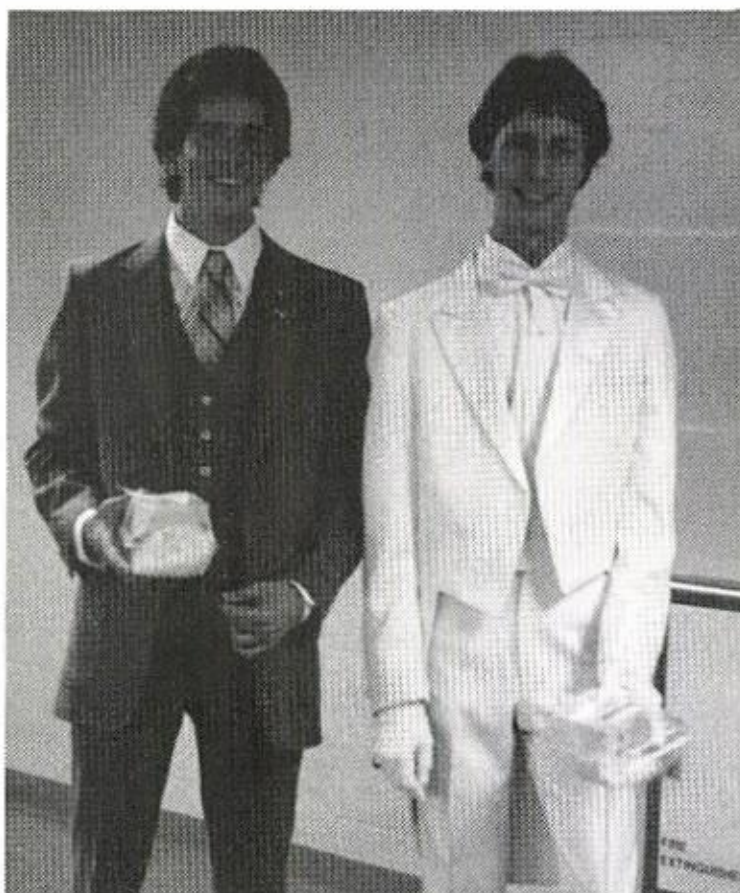

On May 19, 1984, Louisiana School held its first junior prom. The theme of the prom was "Puttin' on the Ritz." The ballroom was decorated with streamers, balloons, and stars to set the mood for a night of glamour, dancing, and entertainment. The main entertainment was the band, Isosceles Popsicles. Champagne glasses and garters were given as favors. There was even a garter ceremony.

SHARON STURDIVANT, Student Activities Coordinator.

The success for the many activities in which the students participated in can be attributed to the diligent efforts of our Student Activities Coordinator, Sharon Sturdivant. Sharon planned the many dances and student social functions. She also scheduled several fascinating speakers who were part of our Saturday Forum program. Sharon Sturdivant gave the student body a break from rigorous hours of study.

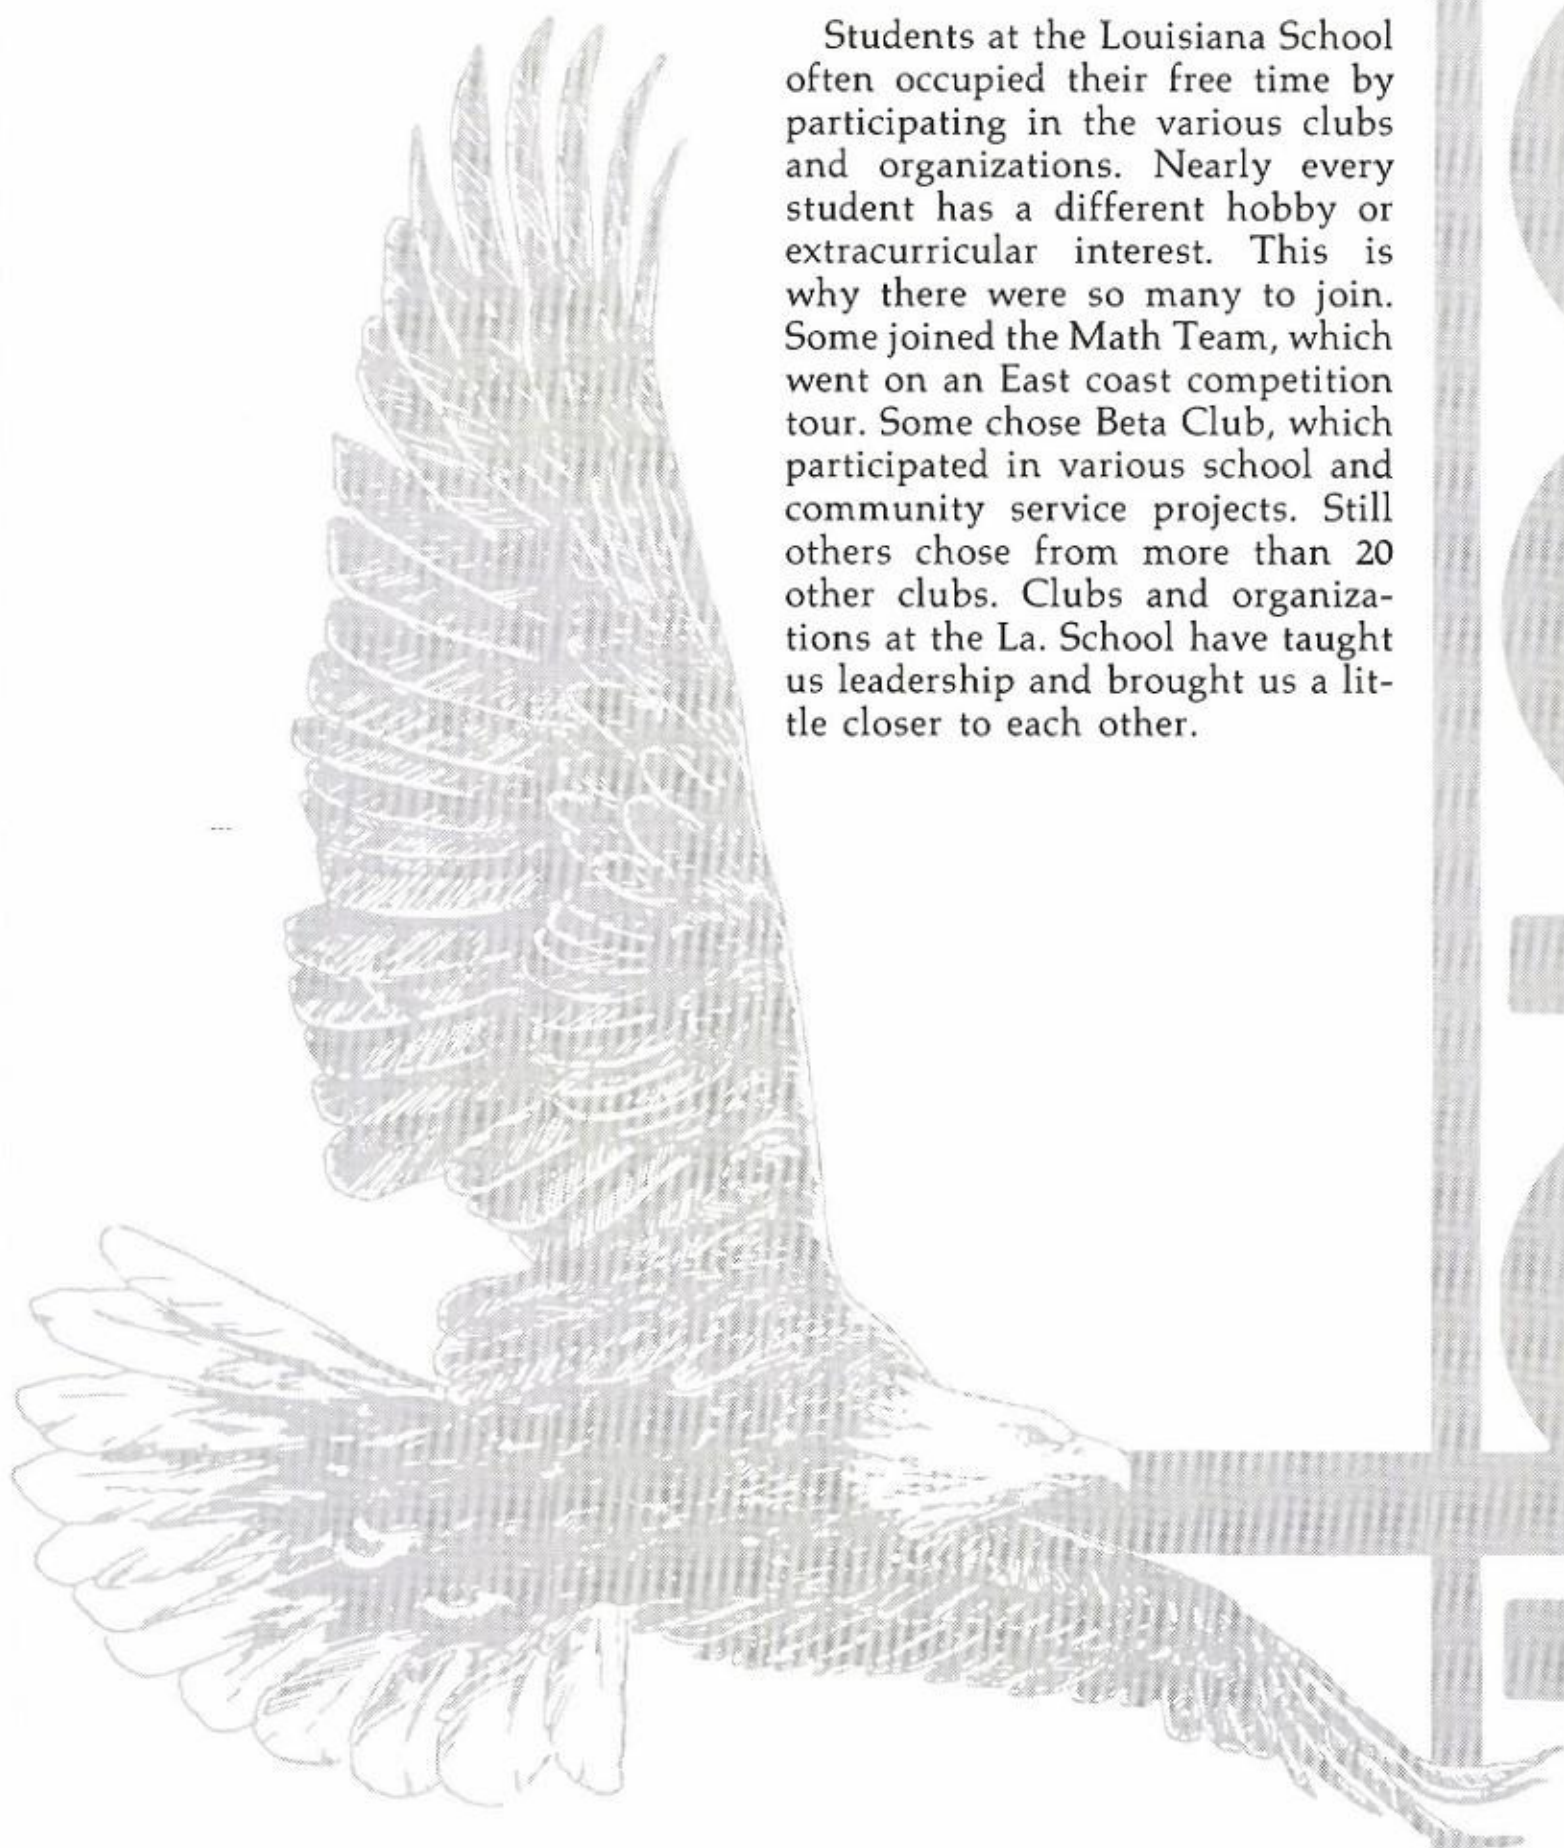

clubs and organizations

Students at the Louisiana School often occupied their free time by participating in the various clubs and organizations. Nearly every student has a different hobby or extracurricular interest. This is why there were so many to join. Some joined the Math Team, which went on an East coast competition tour. Some chose Beta Club, which participated in various school and community service projects. Still others chose from more than 20 other clubs. Clubs and organizations at the La. School have taught us leadership and brought us a little closer to each other.

See it all so clear;
Time is right, time is near.
We know, now what to do.

sports and intramurals

While athletes from around the globe gathered to compete in the 1984 World Olympics, students from around the state of Louisiana gathered to compete in the Louisiana School intramurals. The Olympic winners were awarded with medals of gold, silver, and bronze; but Louisiana School competitors were awarded with something more valuable; good sportsmanship and team spirit created by working with other students as one team. Only a superior few are noted as Olympic winners, but all of Louisiana School competitors are winners.

"For all you do this game is for you."

Louisiana School Teams And Supporters

Intramurals have become a big part of Louisiana School students' activities. Intramural activities range from frisbee, horse shoe, and arm wrestling to softball, tennis, and cross country running. The idea that Louisiana School students are all work and no play is myth. Here's the proof . . .
